Frankfort Resident Dies at 80

Mr. George Schroeder, Sr., died Saturday, February 3, in the home of his daughter, Mrs. Wm. Lorenzen. Mr. Schroeder was 80 years old last November. He was very active until about a week ago when he became ill and immediately left for his home in town and went to his daughter. Mr. Schroeder is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Wm. Lorenzen and Mrs. Wm. Hansen; two sons, George, Jr., and Emil, all of Frankfort; one brother, Charles, of Chicago Heights; eleven grand children and one great grand child. He was buried Tuesday from the home of his daughter, Mrs. Wm. Hansen, to St. Peter's Evang. and Ref. church with burial in Pleasant Hill cemetery.

Featured In Special Writeup

Rev. Paul T. Sanders and his Community Center Foundation in Palos Park figured in a feature story by Rita Fitzpatrick in the Metropolitan section of the Chicago Sunday Tribune. The entire history of the Center was given in a very interesting manner.

The present Foundation was started with a gift of ten acres from Ernest G. Warner and later the entire Warner property, valued at $60,000 was turned over to the Foundation upon the death of the naturalist. There are now six buildings on the land, a girls dormitory given by Adam Int-Hout of Homewood in memory of his wife, a postess; a boy's dormitory donated by Dr. Pasquale de Carlo, head of the Garibaldi institute; a mess hall built by boys out of an old horse shed from Orland Park; a guest house erected from old box car lumber; Fellowship house, and the old brick Warner farm house which serves as a school.

Here are a few of the new buildings being planned for the future:

A small wayside Gothic chapel will stand beneath the trees on a hilltop overlooking the Southwest Highway as a memorial to Ernest G. Warner, who helped make the foundation possible; a number of small shops to center around an ambitious craft project; a huge barn to house all stock, feed, and machinery and an early American type inn as a comfortable shelter.

New Lenox Grain Co., Sponsors Movie

The New Lenox Grain Co., located at Spencer and the Midwest Hatchery of Joliet are sponsoring a colored talking movie "Vitamins on Parade" Wednesday, Feb. 14 at 8 p. m., in the American Legion Hall in Joliet across the street from the Princess Theatre. Free lunch will be served. Another outstanding feature of the program will be a talk by Dr. Cliff D. Carpenter whose subject is "Raising Chickens For Profit." Everyone invited.

Feb. 28 Deadline For Mokena Auto License Payments At $3

Mokena automobile owners are given an opportunity to save themselves $2 on their vehicle license stickers if they purchase them on or before the deadline, February 28. The regular fee is $5 per year, but if these licenses are bought by the date mentioned there will be a reduction of $2, making the fee only $3. All licenses paid after February 28 will take the $5 rate.

Fox Hunt At Mokena Sunday

A fox hunt will be held at Mokena this Sunday afternoon. All those wishing to take part are requested to meet at the Cappel Brothers elevator office at 12 o'clock noon. No rifles will be allowed. Only shot guns can be used.

New Float For Water Tower

The ball on the water tank gauge at Mokena has been stuck so that the gauge does not show whether the tank is full or not. A new float had to be made as the old one had become water logged. The new float will be installed this week. August Hentsch made it and did a good job.

Draws Big Crowd

The Allis-Chalmers Power Farming Day held at the Baugh garage in Frankfort last Friday drew an attendance estimated at near 600. A moving picture program was shown and lunch was served. Latest models of Allis-Chalmers farm equipment were also shown.

I. H. C. TO HOLD EXHIBIT AND PROGRAM, TINLEY

Elmer Siemsen, manager of the Siemesen Implement Sales dealers in McCormick-Deering tractors and implements in Tinley Park will sponsor a good show and big opening at the Saenger Hall in Tinley Park on Thursday, Feb. 15th commencing at 11 a. m. There will be sound movies, entertainment, souvenirs, and prizes.

A hot lunch will be served free by the Ladies Aid Society of the Bachelor Grove Lutheran church.

See the New McCormick-Deering tractors and other farm implements. A cordial invitation is extended to the public in general to attend.

2 Amateur Shows At Frankfort On February 15 and 16

An audition for the amateur show which the Frankfort Civic club will sponsor the 15th and 16th of February will be held Feb. 11, in the school gym. A fine program is in the making. All entries must be made before or on try-out date, February 11, at 1:30 p. m., in the school gym. Contestants from surrounding communities are eligible.

There will be additional features and attractions on each night's program.

Arthur Lambrecht will be the master of ceremonies, with Miss Lillian Collins accompanist.

Every one is cordially invited to attend. Each night five cash prizes are to be awarded.

New Lenox Shows Great Success

The amateur show sponsored by the New Lenox Band Parents Ass'n., was held in the school gym last Thursday and Friday evenings and drew packed houses both nights. R. B. Wight is the director.

Orland Teacher Quietly Married

Miss Lucille Schmadeke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Schmadeke, of Orland Park, and Jack Barton, of Chicago, were united in marriage last Saturday night at nine o'clock in the Christ Lutheran church in Orland Park. The Rev. A. Lach officiated. The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Orville Schmadeke, Orland Park. Only the immediate families witnessed the ceremony.

The bride taught in the Orland Park Public school for the past twelve years. The groom is employed in the Marshall Field store in Chicago.

The newlyweds have gone to house keeping in the Mitchell residence, which they have completely furnished.

Ex-Judge Seeking Public Office

The political campaign in Will county started in earnest Saturday when fifty candidates filed petitions for various county offices.

Voters in the county were rather surprised to hear that Ex-Judge Edwin L. Wilson, Joliet, who was defeated for reelection last June in the 12th Circuit Judicial election, had filed for the Democratic nomination for State's Attorney of Will county.

He was defeated for reelection to the judgeship after a heated campaign. He was the subject of criticism because of an injunction he issued in 1937, restraining Joliet authorities from interfering with the operation of slot machines. An effort to impeach him was made in the Illinois House of Representatives.

He made a very poor record as a public official and many voters in Will county feel this man should never be returned to any public office.

James E. Burke, the incumbent Will County State's Attorney, filed his petition for the Republican nomination last Saturday.

Becker Store In New Hands

Due to the serious illness of A. C. Becker, the latter's grocery and market in Lincoln Estates has been sold out to Don Swinford, who announces he will conduct a cash and carry business. He will continue the same quality line of groceries and meats which Mr. Becker handled. Mr. Becker took over the Becker store this week.

Band Parents to Meet

The regular monthly meeting of the Mokena Band Parents Ass'n. will be held Tuesday, February 13, at 8 p. m.

Mokena Family In Serious Auto Accident

Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Neithammer and daughter, Audrey, of Mokena, figured in a serious automobile accident at Southwest Highway and Harlem Ave., at 8 o'clock Sunday night while on their way home from Chicago.

As the Neithammer car reached the intersection, a car going north on Harlem Ave., driven by a Chicago resident, disregarded the stop sign and crashed into the front of the Neithammer car.

Mrs. Neithammer received a deep gash on the right leg above the knee. She was taken to the Little Company of Mary hospital for first aid treatment and was later brought to her home in Mokena. Mr. Neithammer suffered numerous bruises and sprains. Audrey, who was in the back seat, received a bump on her head.

The Chicago man had his wife and small son in his car. The boy suffered a fractured leg, while the parents were bruised and suffered from shock.

Both cars were badly damaged. The Neithammer car was hauled to Mokena by the Cooper & Hostert wrecker about mid-nite.

FORMER WILL CO. TREAS. CHARGED WITH SHORTAGE

Will county has another big political scandal as the result of Conrad J. Wirth, former Democratic County Treasurer, being charged with a shortage of $342,994. A suit was filed Saturday against Wirth and his bonding companies, setting forth that they owe the county the amount stated.

This is the total of the amounts asked in fifteen counts in a 65 page complaint filed by State's Attorney James E. Burke.

The complaint charges four different types of shortages by Wirth:

- 1.—That he failed to pay out the total amount of taxes collected.
- 2.—That he made unauthorized reductions in the amount of taxes, interest and penalties collected from some taxpayers.
- 3.—That he collected certain amounts of interest, but failed to account for them.
- 4.—That he collected certain tax bills but failed to mark them paid on the tax books.

Here are the allegations charged in the fifteen counts of the bill against Wirth and his bonding companies:

Many residents of eastern Will County received letters the past week from the "Conrad J. Wirth Defense Fund" asking for funds with which Wirth, former Democratic County Treasurer, could hire lawyers and accountants in his defense. These letters, in most instances, have found the waste basket waiting for them. The recipients of these letters feel that the appeal savors of cry-baby stuff and think it is the height of something to ask the public to help pay for the defense cost of an ex-public official to get him out of a jam. If any other citizen gets into difficulties with the law he has no one to solicit funds for his defense. Why should the public be asked to help pay for the defense of an ex-official who is alleged to have short-changed them while holding office? This question is being asked by many of the people who have received letters from the "Defense Fund" the past week.

1. That for the tax year 1934, he collected $3,228,241.36 and disbursed $3,129,949.15, leaving an apparent shortage of $98,292.21.
2. That for the tax year 1935, Wirth collected $3,168,065.30, and disbursed $3,121,778.15, leaving an apparent shortage of $46,287.15.
3. That for the tax year 1936, Wirth collected $3,284,739.94 and disbursed $3,259,961.67, leaving an apparent shortage of $24,778.27.
4. That for the tax year 1937, Wirth collected $3,300,921.10 and disbursed $3,239,565.13, leaving an apparent shortage of $61,355.97.
5. That for the year 1934, Wirth made unauthorized reductions in taxes, interests and costs of $1,207.99.
6. That for the year 1935, he made a similar unauthorized reduction in taxes and interest of $12,989.78.
7. That for the year 1936, these alleged unauthorized reductions totaled $39,454.03.
8. That for the year 1937, these alleged reductions in taxes, interests and costs totaled $37,197.30.
9. That for the year 1934 Wirth collected interest on back taxes totaling $869.47, but failed to charge himself with the collections in the tax books.
10. That for the year 1935, these allegedly unreported collections of interest came to $7,353.03.
11. That for the tax year 1936, these collections of interest on back taxes which the suit charges were not recorded totaled $5,147.84.
12. That for the year 1937, these allegedly unrecorded collections of interest came to $6,650.56.
13. That for the year 1935 Wirth collected $49.75 in taxes but failed to mark the books paid for these collections.
14. That for the year 1936, this collection of taxes not marked paid on the books totaled $627.91.
15. That for the years 1937, Wirth collected $292.80 in taxes which he allegedly failed to mark paid on the books.

The total alleged in all these 15 counts is $342,994.96.

In addition to this civil suit, Wirth now already stands indicted on five true bills charging him with embezzlement and failure to turn over undistributed tax funds to his successor.

FRANKFORT BOY SCOUT TROOP INSTALLED

Impressive ceremonies marked the installation of the new Frankfort Boy Scout Troop No. 68 into the Potawattomi Council Friday night in the Frankfort school gym.

At 7:20 o'clock the Scouts and leaders of all Troops represented marched into the auditorium, with the Frankfort Troop in the honor position.

The opening ceremony was in charge of District Commissioner True Daniels, of Tinley Park. A community sing in charge of Mr. Nagle, of Crete, was next in order.

A colorful service was that of the Tenderfoot Investiture ceremony conducted by the Scouts of Troop No. 50, Markham, Edward Klemm, Scoutmaster. This troop was in charge of the candle lighting ritual.

Wm. Breidert, Frankfort, Scoutmaster of the Frankfort Troop, presented the Tenderfoot pins and registration cards to the new Scouts.

Scout Executive Harold Bolz, of Harvey was in charge of the formal installation of the new troop. He presented the Troop Charter to H. J. Lambrecht, president of the Frankfort Civic club, who are sponsors of the new Troop. Mr. Lambrecht, after a few words of acceptance on behalf of the Civic club, turned the charter over to Mayor Sangmeister, chairman of the Troop committee. He accepted the charter in behalf of the Troop committee.

MORE
Next Mr. Lambrecht presented registration cards to members of the Troop Committee and the Scoutmaster.

A candle, representing the Spirit of the Troop, was then lighted by Scoutmaster Breidert. As he did so, Scout Executive Boltz made a few appropriate remarks.

The address of the evening was delivered by Albert Stolz, of Midlothian, district chairman of the Indian Trail district, on the subject "Where Are We Going?"

A colorful feature was the presentation of the American Flag to Troop 68 on behalf of the Civic club by H. J. Lambrecht, president.

The ceremonies closed with the use of the new Flag and the regular Scout service, in charge of True Daniels.

Following is the personnel of the new Troop:
Scoutmaster, Wm. Breidert, Jr.
The Committee consists of George Sangmeister, chairman; William C. Bennett, Herbert P. Folkers, Edward H. Vollrath and Edward J. Warning.

The following boys are members of the new Troop:
John T. Becker, Clark G. Bennett, Warren Bobzin, Eugene Bogdon, Willard L. Eberhard, Billy Folkers, Grant B. Geuther, Calvert E. Heath, Jr., Dale Warning and Kenneth P. Wise.

St. Mary's, Mokena Scene of Pretty Wedding Last Sat.

A simple but impressive wedding ceremony took place last Saturday afternoon, February 3, at 5 o'clock, in St. Mary's Catholic church in Mokena, when Miss Rita Gunhouse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Gunhouse of Mokena, became the bride of Alvin Sorensen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nels Sorensen, also of Mokena. The Rev. Father Roman read the service, using the single ring ceremony. Only members of the immediate family were present.

Mrs. John Walsh presided at the organ, playing the processional and recessional march.

The bride was gowned in white satin with a shoulder length veil and carried an arm bouquet of white roses and sweet peas.

Miss Eileen Walsh was the bridesmaid and wore peach taffeta with a halo of white flowers and an arm bouquet of orchids and sweet peas.

The groom was attended by Spencer Hausser, Mokena, as best man.

Following the church ceremony a wedding dinner was served in the home of the bride's parents, with members of the immediate families present.

Mr. and Mrs. Sorensen went on a short motor trip and will make their home in the Fred Whitlark cottage which was completely furnished.

The bride before her marriage was a telephone operator in the Wentworth exchange in Chicago. Mr. Sorensen has been in the employ of the General Electric Company in Chicago for many years.

Civic Asso. Will Back Educational Project

In line with its constitutional objectives, the Mokena Civic Association is sponsoring an educational project in the form of town meetings, to be held whenever time and circumstances permit. The first of an indefinite series of such town meetings will be held on February 22, at 8 p. m., in the public school gym.

The speaker who has been engaged for this occasion is a distinguished gentleman who was born and reared in Russia, and who has been educated both in Europe and in the United States. At the present time he is engaged in traveling thru our land on an extensive lecture tour, which will take him thru all states of the nation as well as Canada and Mexico. The Civic Ass'n. is therefore indeed happy in being able to procure him for a lecture in Mokena.

The Civic Ass'n. is desirous that everyone may have the chance to hear Mr. Werner v. Kuhlberg, and therefore no admission will be charged. The Association will meet all expenses incurred. This will be one of the public contributions to the civic affairs of our community. It is hoped that our town's people will show their appreciation by turning out in large numbers to hear a timely, interesting and educational discussion of events in troubled Europe. Watch next week's Bulletin for further information.

Will Hold Basketball Tourney

The Orland Park heavyweight basketball team will sponsor a four-day tourney play at the Tinley Park gym next Thursday through Sunday, February 15 through 18. There are 16 teams entered, and they are as follows:

Eight heavyweight teams consisting of Orland Park, Lockport (Texaco), St. John's English Lutheran church, Joliet Eagles, Lemont, Harvey Merchants, Chicago Filter (Joliet), and Blue Island.

Four lightweight teams from Orland Park, Blue Island, Mokena, and Musser's Sport, of Joliet.

Four girl teams from Orland Park, Palos Park, Frankfort, and Oak Forest.

The tourney will begin Thursday with four games being held each evening and Sunday afternoon. The best teams in this part of the country are entered and this tourney should prove to be one of the best held in this section. Lemont, who plays the first evening, has one tourney won already this year, and are a great threat in this one.

The teams in all divisions are well matched, and if they play as well as they have been playing, each game should prove to be a real thriller. So let's see all of you basketball fans out at Orland's first tourney. Don't forget the date — February 15, 16, 17, and 18, at the Tinley Park gym.

Observes Sixth Anniversary

Morry Larson who has been operating a tavern in the former Sutter building in Mokena for the past six years, observed the anniversary on Feb. 2nd with a free lunch and dancing. Mr. Larson after he purchased the old landmark had it completely remodeled.

A Dash of Red

By HELEN ALPERT
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

JOE had thought it would be exciting to show them Red Jim's place out on the Philadelphia road. "And is it tough!" he had laughed. "Man, these are the dregs what am! Oil workers out for sport—a slice of the lower depths—a week's pay blown like a shot—swell!"

"What fun!" they had shouted as they'd jostled their way to a table.

Joe looked uneasily at his tiny partner as they circled the floor. The air seemed menacing. "Maybe we'd better scram, Jackie," he said. But Jacqueline impishly tossed her head. "Joe, I've never seen such people before. Such types! My word, they look like pickpockets, kidnapers, gunmen, forgers—even murderers!"

Bob and Sara swept past them. "Hey!" Joe called, "somebody ought to sit at our table and watch the coats!" Bob and Sara obligingly danced off the floor.

"What a joint!" Joe exclaimed. "Want the whole floor, bud," a voice snarled. It did not ask; it stated; and Joe blinked.

"What a joint!"—out of earshot. Jackie giggled. "Oh, Joe—your face—"

"Yeah—I thought he was going to plug me."

"Maybe we're too conspicuous in our evening clothes."

Joe looked glumly at his immaculate self. "I'd give these away in a second for a nice pair of greasy overalls. I'd feel safer."

"And Bob and Sara, too!" Jackie laughed and crept closer. "But really, Joe," soberly, "these gimcracks I'm wearing are the only things left from the robbery last week."

"That was some job," said Joe. "Getting into a fortress of a house like yours and grabbing everything without leaving a trace."

"We've been stepping over police and detectives ever since—but all they can give is a bad guess," Jackie shrugged shortly. "There were some pieces we prayed we'd never lose—or forget. Dad's college photos—pins—" she broke off. "Oh, well. Swing her along, Joe!"

They flung themselves into a nimble step when a burly figure shouldered through to the wall. "Break, bud?" Again it was not a question but a demand.

Joe spluttered. "I—no—"

"That is, if the lady don't mind?" "I don't mind," she said briefly. "In fact, I might enjoy it."

The man swaggered. He was big and dapper. His derby was pushed far back on his head and Jackie saw thick red waves of hair.

"Carrot top?" she asked, smiling a little.

"Who, me? Oh, sure, kid. That's why they call me Red Jim!" Her eyes flamed wide. "So you're Red Jim!"

"That's me, baby. Red's my favorite color. I go for red-striped ties. I like red." He expanded. A ruby red ring glittered on his finger. "Red's my lucky color, too. Sometime I'm gonna get me a rug like I seen marchin' up some steps the same color exactly as my hair!"

"Impossible!" she breathed. "Look!" he drew a triangular plush swatch out of his wallet. It matched his hair perfectly.

"Oh, yes!" she smiled bewitchingly.

The music blared to an ear-splitting crescendo and ceased.

"Here y'are, boy-friend," said Red Jim patronizingly to Joe. "See you later."

Jim was white with rage. "The cocky rat!" he snapped.

Sara shrieked. "Red Jim!"

"Ye proud owner," explained Jackie. "Excuse me while I polish up for the maiden's next encounter with the gent." She sped off with her handbag.

A squad of uniformed policemen had surrounded Jim.

"We want you for the Macrae robbery." Someone's voice was ice.

"Macrae? Say, that's a big joke on you. Last Wednesday night I was right here till morning. I can prove it, see?"

"Alibi Jim, as usual. But this time you're pickled."

"Says who?"

"Says Miss Jacqueline Macrae herself!"

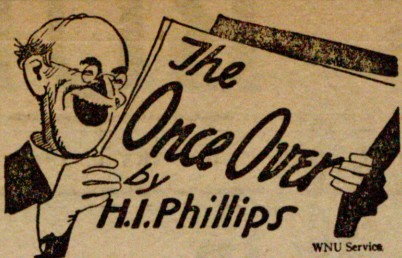

Jackie appeared in the doorway, very quiet and white.

"Slick job. No fingerprints. No clues. No nothin'. A clean getaway, fella. But just a little too fond of red for your health!"

"I don't getcha."

Jackie spoke. "You said you saw a stair runner exactly the same shade of red as your hair. That was in my house. The runner was tacked down Wednesday morning and removed the next day. A tiny corner of it was missing. The rug was taken away the following morning."

She stared intently at his red hair. "You see," she said, "we couldn't stand the color."

THAT MAN IS HERE AGAIN!
("Government Announces a New Census in April."—Headline.)

Q.—I'm the census man.
A.—We don't want any today.
Q.—You don't understand; I'm taking a census.
A.—Again!

Q.—Do you own this house?
A.—I can't find out. I thought I owned it but I get so many bills, statements, demands and inquiries about it that I'm not certain.

Q.—Is there a federal loan on it?
A.—Do you know anything there isn't a federal loan on?

Q.—How many people live here?
A.—Six.
Q.—How many are working?
A.—They're all working.
Q.—Doing what?
A.—Answering questions of census takers.

Q.—How many adults in the family?

A.—Three adults and two children, but I think the children are more adult mentally than the others.

Q.—What makes you think so?
A.—They know better than to answer the doorbell every time it rings.

Q.—Were you born in this country?

A.—Yes, and away back when it was THIS country.

Q.—What does your husband do?

A.—He's a questionnaire preparer.

Q.—Is he satisfied?

A.—Why not? He and you are in the only two lines in which there is always plenty of work in this country.

Q.—Have you a bank account?

A.—Do I have to answer that one?

Q.—Why hesitate? Is there anything wrong about having a bank account?

A.—I'm beginning to wonder.

Q.—Have you an electric refrigerator?

A.—Aha! I begin to see it all now. You're an icebox salesman.

Q.—No man; that's just one of the census questions.

A.—For goodness sake, can't we have a refrigerator in this country any longer without notifying Washington?

Q.—How many bathrooms have you?

A.—Who wants to know, the attorney-general, Secretary Ickes or the SEC?

Q.—Never mind. How many bathrooms and have they tubs or showers?

A.—Showers. We would have had tubs only Washington discovered my grandfather was a Republican.

Q.—Is anybody in the house engaged in farming?

A.—No; my aunt tried raising geese, but you can't do it in a shower bath.

Q.—Thanks. I think that completes the questions.

A.—Oh, no, it doesn't. YOU'LL BE BACK AGAIN NEXT MONTH!

TAKES PLANNING TO PRODUCE MEATLESS MEALS

See Recipes Below.

Favorite Foods in Lent

It takes a bit of planning to produce meatless meals that please the family because we're so accustomed to the meal that's built around substantial roasts, or chops, or steaks. But fish, eggs, milk, cheese, beans, peas and nuts, are excellent protein or body-building foods that should be substituted now and then for meat. Their uses are many and with judicious planning they add interest and variety to meals.

Fish and eggs occupy an important place in meatless meals; less commonly used, but inexpensive and good, are cheese, nuts, peas and beans.

Cheese is a concentrated food which gives good returns for the money spent on it; because it is an excellent body-building food and is rich in mineral salts, and because its flavor combines well with that of other foods, it should be more widely used. A little cheese goes a long way when combined with cereal products such as rice or macaroni.

Nuts are apt to be considered a mere accompaniment to a meal, or something to be nibbled on "between meals," but wisely used, they're an acceptable substitute for meat.

Vegetable plates are popular for meatless meals. Where they include peas or beans or eggs (which might be hard cooked, sliced and creamed) they provide a satisfying and "balanced" meal. Banana Scallops are an unusual addition to a vegetable dinner—hearty and delicious, and easy to prepare.

Lenten Feast.

Mix together 8 cups soft bread crumbs, ½ cup fat (melted), 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ cup pepper, 2 tablespoons onion (minced), 1 teaspoon poultry seasoning, 4 eggs (slightly beaten), ¼ cup milk and 1 cup peanuts (chopped). Pack into a well-greased ring mold and bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees) for about 30 minutes.

Baked Eggs.

12 slices bread
¼ cup butter
6 eggs
Salt, pepper, paprika

Cut crusts from whole slices of bread and spread six of the slices with butter which has been thoroughly creamed using a small biscuit cutter, cut the center from the six unbuttered slices. Butter these and place one centerless slice on each of the buttered whole slices of bread. Break an egg in the center, and place on baking sheet. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and paprika, and bake in a slow oven (325 degrees Fahrenheit) until the eggs are set. Serve at once.

Baked Tapioca Cheese.

1 pint milk
1 egg (well beaten)
3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon paprika

1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1 cup American cheese (grated)

Mix all ingredients in order given. Place in baking casserole and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) approximately 15 minutes—or until mixture thickens. Stir occasionally while baking. Serve on hot buttered toast.

Rice au Gratin.

Part I.—1 cup rice
3 quarts water
1 teaspoon salt

Wash rice and drop into boiling salted water. Boil rapidly (uncovered) until rice is tender. Drain and place in a buttered baking dish. Cover with Cream Sauce.

Cream Sauce.

Part II.—3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
½ cups milk (scalded)
¼ teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper

½ cup cheese (grated)
2 teaspoons prepared mustard

Melt butter and add flour. Mix thoroughly and add milk. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Remove from fire, add seasonings, cheese and prepared mustard. Pour over the rice, dot with butter and sprinkle with paprika. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for approximately 20 minutes.

Banana Scallops.

(Serves 6)
6 firm bananas
1 egg (beaten)
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup fine crumbs (cracker or bread crumbs or crumbled corn flakes)

Peel bananas. Cut in slices (crosswise) ¾ to 1 inch thick. Dip in the beaten egg. Drain, and roll in crumbs. Fry in deep fat at (375 degrees Fahrenheit) for 1½ to 2 minutes, or until the scallops are brown.

Tuna Fish Scallops.

(Serves 6)
1½ cups milk
3 cups soft bread crumbs
½ teaspoon onion salt
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
½ teaspoon salt

2 cups tuna fish (flaked)
3 hard-cooked eggs (sliced)
½ cup cracker crumbs (buttered)

Scald milk, remove from flame, and soak crumbs in it for 15 minutes. Add seasonings. Add tuna fish. Arrange this mixture in layers in a buttered baking dish, alternating with the sliced hard-cooked eggs. Top with the buttered cracker crumbs. Bake in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit) for 20 to 25 minutes.

Swiss Eggs.

(Serves 6)
¼ pound sharp cheese
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup coffee cream
¼ teaspoon salt

Dash cayenne pepper
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
6 eggs (beaten slightly)

Sliver the cheese and spread evenly over bottom of a shallow buttered baking dish. Dot with butter. Mix together the cream, salt, pepper, and mustard and pour one half of this mixture over the cheese.

Beat eggs slightly and add. Last of all, add the remaining half of the cream mixture. Bake in a moderate oven (325 degrees Fahrenheit) approximately 25-30 minutes, or until eggs are set, but not dry.

This is the season for piping hot soups—thick, substantial cream soups and chowders to "take the chill out of one's bones," and serve as the mainstay of a noonday meal; or steaming, perfectly seasoned, clear soups to serve as an appetizer before a hearty dinner.

Watch for this column next week. In it you'll find some of Eleanor Howe's own tested recipes for soups that are bound to be family favorites.

Better Baking.

This practical, usable booklet by Eleanor Howe is, just as the name indicates, a guide to "better baking." You'll find in it hints on how to improve your technique, and a wealth of reliable tested recipes—recipes for delicious breads and cakes and cookies, and for the flaky tempting pies your families love.

To get your copy of "Better Baking" now, just send 10 cents in coin to "Better Baking" care of Eleanor Howe, 919 N. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

Parchment Paper Keeps Fish in Shape in Pan

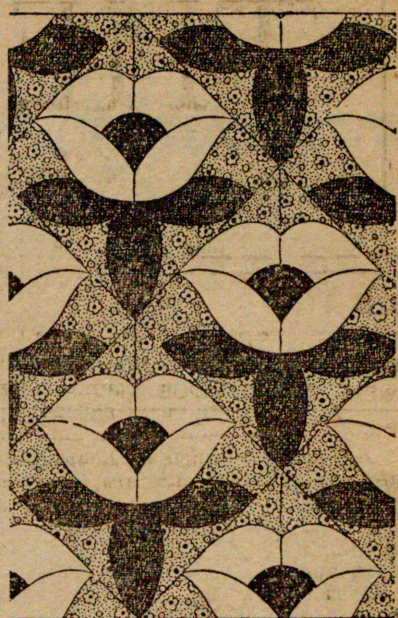

Broiled fish is difficult to remove from the broiler without breaking—just as it is in a frying pan. A piece of parchment paper cut just the shape of the fish, may be greased and placed under each slice of fish.

It will not be necessary to turn the fish, as it will broil all the way through. Then the parchment may be removed upon serving.

How To Relieve Bronchitis

Bronchitis, acute or chronic, is an inflammatory condition of the mucous membranes lining the bronchial tubes. Creomulsion goes right to the seat of the trouble to loosen germ laden phlegm, increase secretion and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes. Tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding that you are to like the way it quickly allays the cough or you are to have your money back.

A school-teacher was very much annoyed by the continued mischievousness of one of her boys. At last she exclaimed in exasperation: "I wish I could be your mother for just about one week. I would rid you of your naughty disposition."

"Very well, I will speak to father about it," responded the youngster coolly.

Shirred Dress With Corsette Waistline

THE corsette waistline is scheduled for much popularity this coming season, probably because it makes you look so beguilingly slim. This simple little dress (8634) with a piquant peasant air about it, has bodice fullness and a ripping skirt, shirred at the top, that look perfectly charming on slender figures. The square neckline is quite deep, the sleeves very round.

This dress will be very pretty made up in bold-figured cottons like percale, calico or gingham for house wear, with rows of ricrac braid. And you'll also like a dress like this for street and informal afternoons, of printed silk or flat crepe. It's one of those easy, becoming styles that you'll repeat several times. Your pattern includes a helpful step-by-step sew chart.

Pattern No. 8634 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 3 3/4 yards of 39-inch material without nap; 1 yard binding; 8 1/4 yards ricrac.

For a pattern of this attractive model send 15 cents in coin, your name, address, style, number and size to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1324, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill.

FIGHT COLDS

by helping nature build up your cold-fighting resistance

If you suffer one cold right after another, here's sensational news! Mrs. Elizabeth Vickery writes: "I used to catch colds very easily. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery helped to strengthen me just splendidly. I am better, have more stamina, and was troubled very little with colds."

This great medicine, formulated by a practicing physician, helps combat colds this way: (1) It stimulates the appetite. (2) It promotes flow of gastric juices. Thus you eat more; your digestion improves; your body gets greater nourishment which helps nature build up your cold-fighting resistance.

So successful has Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery been that over 30,000,000 bottles have already been used. Proof of its remarkable benefits. Get Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery from your druggist today, or write Dr. Pierce, Dept. N-100, Buffalo, N. Y., for generous free sample. Don't suffer unnecessarily from colds.

Several times I have written about the responsibility of the pedestrian. During a recent year over 16,000 pedestrians were killed and approximately 276,000 were injured.

Crossing between intersections ranked first as a cause of death and injury. The next cause was attributed to walking on rural highways. Crossing where signal was not available was another factor. Children playing in the street was one of the causes in this large death toll.

The pedestrian has a definite responsibility to obey traffic signals, to cross streets at proper intersections and at proper times, to walk on the proper side of the highway, and to use little extra care at night in crossing the streets.

You who are pedestrians do not condemn the automobile driver for these pedestrian deaths. A large part of the responsibility and the cause rests with "the man on the street."

Rock Island Carries
Many Passengers
on Streamliners

Official tabulation by the Rock Island Railroad management, covering the number of passengers carried on the streamline Rocket trains of that railway during 1939, shows a total of 142,313 persons used the Reoria Rocket service for the twelve months ending December 31, last. Incidentally, the figures show that this Rocket train traveled a total of 235,160 miles in rendering this service.

The two Rocky Mountain Rocket trains, which went into service between Chicago and Colorado on November 12, last, carried 16,869 passengers during the 49 days they were operated in 1939.

The tabulation shows a total of 516,700 passengers carried on the fleet of nine Rocket trains last year.

P. T. A. NEWS

The regular "Founders Day" program of the Tinley Park PTA was held last Friday, February 2 in the PTA room at the school. Mrs. Burley Anfield, vice president, took over the chair in the absence of Mrs. Walter Johnson, president.

The meeting was opened with a word of greeting to all. Mr. Clinefell, the principal, took charge of the program and introduced Miss Farrair's room, who gave an exhibition of handicraft. This was followed by a talk by Mr. Story, a teacher at the Chicago Heights Junior High school, on School Legislation. The sum and substance of his talk was that the state is becoming more and more school-minded and that we should try and bring the standard of our school up into the upper ten bracket instead of ranking thirty-sixth.

Our Founders Day program was conducted by Mrs. Schellhase and was very impressive. She brought forth how our P. T. A. originated in Tinley Park in 1925, and spoke of all the past presidents up to the present date. Many of those she mentioned were at the meeting and received a gift of two yellow flowers in appreciation of what they have done in the past and what they are still doing for our organization and PTA work in general.

There were two charter members present, Mrs. John Funk and Mrs. Sandridge.

A collection was taken and sent to state headquarters as our Founder's Day gift. The room award for the day was won by Miss Farrair's room, who certainly deserved it for their part in the program.

After the meeting was adjourned coffee and cake were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Stover, Miss Voss and Mrs. Miller. The table was lovely with the color scheme of blue and yellow carried out in the candles, cake, and the sugar and creamer.

Mrs. E. J. Koepfner

The card and bunco party given by the Tinley Park P. T. A. last Wednesday, January 31, was a success because of the co-operation of everyone concerned. Let me thank those who bought tickets, donated prizes, cakes, pies, etc., and those who so faithfully gave of their time to get out and work in the name of the Tinley Park P. T. A. May I also personally thank Mrs. Anfield and Mrs. Stockman for taking over the Ways and Means chairmanship because of the illness of Mrs. Herman Frietag at that time.

modernized immediately. Included rebuilding, widening, and relocation. With 170 new bridges involved, the sum of $23,535,000 would be required for this work. Officials estimate that 1,197 additional miles should be reconstructed within the next five years. Yet, in 1938, only 70 miles could be reconstructed with available funds!

Without diversion, there would have been money available for part of this work. The sum of $35,535,000 is needed for immediate reconstruction, yet $6,356,250 is being diverted in 1940. Even if this could be applied to reconstruction the highway fund would still lack almost three-fourths of the sum sufficient to fill the immediate demand.

Total highway department revenues estimated for 1940 are: from motor fuel tax, $40,000,000; from license fees, $21,500,000.

Christian Science Churches

"Love" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, February 4.

The Golden Text was, "The love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us" (Romans 5:5).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "And he answering said, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind; and with all thy strength; and thy neighbor as thyself" (Luke 10:27).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy:

"The habitual struggle to be always good is unceasing prayer. Its motives are, made manifest in the blessings they bring,—blessings which, even if not acknowledged in audible words, attest our worthiness to be partakers of Love" (p. 4).

ORLAND PARK

The regular meeting of Laurel Camp No. 1796, Royal Neighbors, was held in Creer's hall, Thursday evening, January 25. Also the thermometer registered below zero, a good number of members ventured out for the installation of officers. Olive Loebe served as installing officer, Hilda Cox as ceremonial marshal and Christina Rust as ceremonial chancellor. The officers installed are as follows:

Edna Doctor, oracle; Lorraine Ballou, vice oracle; Loretta Ludwig, past oracle; Sylvia Stigers, recorder; Emma Jacobson, receiver; Nora Felton, chancellor; Mollie Reish, marshal; Marie Heiting, ass't. marshal; Katherine Yates, inner sentinel; Leona West, outer sentinel; Maria Smith, manager, three yrs.; Lillian Knox, musician; Violet Jacobson, juvenile director; Sylvia Stigers, director of degree team; Graces: Emma Burkhardt, faith; Hilda Cox, courage; Esther Conover, modesty; Nellie Wheeler, unselfishness; Clista Margolis, endurance; and Anna Yunker, flag bearer.

Olive Loebe was elected and installed to fill the unexpired term of office manager for two years, Ruth Morlock having resigned from this office.

After the meeting adjourned a social hour was enjoyed by playing buncos. Prizes were awarded to winners, and delicious refreshments were served by the committee in charge, Olive Rust, Christina Rust, Violet Jacobson and Edna Doctor.

Beagley Attends Frigidaire Meeting; Views 1940 Models

Back from the Morrison hotel in Chicago where a few days ago he attended a meeting introducing 1940 Frigidaire electric refrigerators, electric ranges and electric water heaters, Clarence Beagley, local Frigidaire appliance dealer reports that this company's products this year excel any previously offered.

"The information I learned about the 1940 lines was to me conclusive evidence that features have reached new perfection," Mr. Beagley said. "The engineers, technicians and designers who developed the new models undoubtedly have outdone themselves in incorporating improvements that are both practical and attractive."

"Every year I have a feeling that new models cannot possibly be appreciably improved over the previous year's units. But each year I discover that Frigidaire's resources for development have invented new advantages in food keeping and preparation. These improvements are more striking this year than ever before, as refinements of exclusive Frigidaire features provide added usefulness that offers every user greater savings and convenience."

Last week's column carried an item that should have read:

Mr. Lawrence Woodman is convalescing from an operation on his foot in Alexian Bros. hospital in Chicago.

Rep. Auditor
Launches Campaign

Herman C. Grassle has announced his candidacy for the office of County Auditor of Will county.

Mr. Grassle lives at 209 Western Ave., and is the son of the late Fred Grassle, formerly prominent west side baker, and son of an old German Lutheran family.

Herman Grassle was born and reared in Joliet. He was identified with his father in the bakery business for many years. After his father retired from business, Herman took it over and operated the business.

Later he organized the Atlas Wall Paper Mills, Inc., at Coal City, Ill., and acted as its secretary and treasurer. More recently he was manager of the White and Indiana Truck sales in this area, with offices at 211 Western Ave., in the Grassle building, his present address.

His activity in city, town, and county campaigns has always been to promote the best interests of the Republican party, this interest and activity is well known.

He has never before been a candidate for public office.

The foregoing facts are presented because Mr. Grassle is one of the prominent candidates in this campaign and already we feel that his candidacy is tinged with the colors of success. In any event, we feel that the character, experience, and record of Mr. Grassle entitles him to careful consideration of every thinking voter.

Herman C. Grassle

MARLEY

Mrs. Loren Sass

Members of the Little Sunbeam and Junior Booster classes of the Marley Sunday school are invited to attend a Valentine party in the church basement at two o'clock, Saturday afternoon, February 10.

Mr. and Mrs. Russel Lauffer were dinner guests Sunday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Gillette.

Mrs. Frank Speiker is ill in her home.

Mrs. Fred Lauffer, Miss Alma Handorf, Miss Marion Handorf, Miss Laura Bachmann and Mrs. John Handorf attended the Joliet Herald News Cooking school at the Rialto theatre in Joliet the past week.

They were fortunate in seeing Dick Powell, motion picture star, who was a guest of the school on Thursday.

Mrs. Madge Storm and John Cutler were visitors in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Marshall Sunday evening.

Harold Miller has been confined to his home with influenza.

Mr. Frank Savage and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gorham attended a birthday dinner and farewell party in honor of Earl Haley, Jr., in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Earle Haley, Sr., of Chicago, Saturday night. Earl, Jr., left Monday morning for the University of Illinois.

Vernon Bormet was a guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Bormet and family on Sunday.

Mrs. George Peterson and Mrs. Loren Sass attended a bridal shower in honor of Mrs. Kenneth Scott, in the home of Mrs. John Bentson, Yorkville, Ill., Saturday afternoon, February 3.

Mr. and Mrs. Laverne Lauffer, Joliet, were guests in the Fred Lauffer home on Sunday.

Mrs. John Ambrosia is ill in her home.

A State Gleaner rally was held in the Colonial hall, New Lenox, Tuesday evening, January 30, with the Maple Street Arbor serving as the hostess arbor. Approximately 250 were present. Ray Rotham, state Chief Gleaner, called the meeting to order and introduced Mrs. Nellie Goodknecht, of Kankakee, Lecture Bureau manager. She announced the program furnished by the various arborers, which consisted of vocal solos, duets, piano solo, and tap dancing. The Maple Street Arbor was represented by Mary Gorham and Kenneth Mosberg, who sang a duet, and Bob Holt, who favored with a solo. Miss Emily Anderson was the accompanist. Mrs. Guy Everton, of Foss Arbor, Mrs. Warren Sipple, of Kankakee, Mrs. Harry Ayers, of West Lockport, and Mrs. Fred Blodgett, of Maple Street Arbor, were awarded prizes in the scrap book contest. J. R. Liest, Joliet, was introduced, and with a few well-chosen words, announced Mr. Henry Hackett, the National President, from Detroit. He presented James Frazer of the Maple Street Arbor, and Edward Fortin of Gillman, with service watches in recognition of their twenty year service as secretary and treasurer in their respective arborers.

Mr. Hackett spoke on the topic "Gleanerism in Illinois," and later named Mr. Fortin as the new state manager. Singing of "God Be With You 'til We Meet Again" closed the program. Lea's Melody Boys furnished the music for dancing which concluded the evening.

Miss Miller has been ill in her home.

Mr. Ike Moore and Miss Ruth McClure, of New Lenox, spent Sunday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Moore.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Sproat visited with relatives in Worth Sunday afternoon.

Earl Corp is ill in the Herbert Corp home in Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Eaton, of the Canal Zone, Panama, spent Friday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Marshall.

Mr. and Mrs. William Rhoda and son, Arthur, Lemont, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Cleveland on Sunday.

PALOS PARK

Miss Ruby Stockdale

A travel talk on Italy and Switzerland was the topic of discussion at the last meeting of the Woman's club, February 1, in the home of Mrs. J. W. Mahaffay. Mrs. Ralph Dye was the guest speaker of the day.

Mrs. Fred Muhlhausen will be the hostess to the next Woman's club meeting, to be held in her home February 15.

Ladies Aid Society of the Palos

Park Community church will meet in the home of Mrs. Edward Hyink on February 13, at 2:00 p. m.

Palos Boy Scouts of the Palos Park Community church will hold their "Parent Night" and Investiture service February 16 in the church. A candle lighting ceremony will be held as the new members are invested into the Troop. Everyone is invited to attend the affair.

The Troop has also promised to take part in the dedication of the new community building which will be held on March 30. The date of the dedication has been changed to March 30, due to the Lenten season.

The Choral club, a newly organized mixed chorus singing group, will also take part in the ceremonies. This will be the first public appearance of the group.

Palos Service League held a meeting last Monday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Robert Harkness.

'Tis rumored that the Girl Scout Troop may get a Valentine party given to them by the Boy Scout unit.

Palos Woman's Club

The Palos Woman's club will sponsor a Valentine party for Ward 21 of the Oak Forest Infirmary February 14, from 2 to 4 p. m.

Entertainment will be furnished by Dorothy Robson.

Mr. Frank Veneck, Superintendent of the Infirmary, Mrs. Marks, Third District chairman and Mrs. Harry W. Crowley, president of the Palos Woman's club will be guests of honor.

There will be refreshments and gifts for the inmates.

Mrs. Irving Pronger, Welfare chairman, will be in charge of the party.

Mrs. Fred Muhlhausen will be the hostess to club members and guests Thursday, February 15, at 2 p. m., in her home at 125th and 81st Ave.

Program will feature Press and Publicity. Guest speakers will be Mr. E. M. Schuessler, Editor of the Town Crier Suburban News, Miss Rita Fitzpatrick, Club editor of the Chicago Sunday Tribune, and Mrs. George A. Harriman, State Press chairman.

Mrs. Joel L. Collins, chairman, will introduce the speakers.

MOKENA

Foxes have been making their appearance on farms in this vicinity quite frequently. Several were shot since December, and Saturday three foxes were seen on the Edward Maue farm northeast of Mokena. A group of young hunters were soon on the job, but two of the foxes had disappeared. Only one was bagged by the hunters.

Morry Larson, who has been operating a tavern in the former Sutter place for six years, held a celebration in honor of the event Friday night.

Mrs. Alfred Heiman has been on the sick list the past week.

Elmer L. Cooper, Lawrence Kohl, Stokes Nebeker, James Egerton, and Wm. Semmler attended the installation of the Frankfort Boy Scout Troop held in the Frankfort school gym Friday evening.

It is reported that Mokena may have a building boom this spring and summer. Eight new homes are in prospect.

The new Werner Hardware store in Mokena was formally opened for business Saturday morning and was very well patronized. It is hoped that this new enterprise will be given liberal patronage, as a hardware store has been very much in need in this town.

Friday morning burning soot falling from a chimney on the Gunhouse place south of town set fire to the shingle roof. The blaze was noticed by Mr. Gunhouse, and the Mokena fire department was called, with Fire Chief Herman Schweser in charge. When the fire truck got a short distance beyond the four corners south of town it stopped because the gasoline supply ran out. A sprinkling can full of gasoline was quickly secured at the Robinson filling station and the truck proceeded to the fire. The blaze was put out in short order, and the damage amounted to a four foot square burned into the roof.

Miss Lillian Hellmuth underwent an appendicitis operation in Silver Cross hospital the past week. She is convalescing nicely.

Herman Grassle, Joliet, who is a candidate for County Auditor on the Republican ticket called on the Mokena voters Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Semmler entertained at a birthday dinner Wednesday evening in honor of the birth dates of their daughter, Miss Ada and Mrs. Hugh Deadmore, sister of Mrs. Semmler.

Ethel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chauncy Weiber underwent an operation in the Silver Cross hospital in Joliet Friday for the removal of tonsils and adenoids. She is getting along nicely.

Wm. Niethammer, a former Mokena resident now residing in Chicago, is reported in poor health suffering from diabetes.

Clarence Werner was taken to the Silver Cross hospital, Joliet, Monday on the verge of pneumonia. He had a fever of 104. Latest reports tell he is getting along fairly well.

The Sunday school teachers of the Methodist church held a meeting Monday night in the home of Mrs. John Balaz.

The water pipes at the Kenneth Brown residence on First St., which had frozen up during the recent cold snap, were thawed out the latter part of the week with an electric thawer by Tom Cooper of Orland.

Mrs. John Martin has been quite ill during the past week with heart trouble.

The Frankfort township unit of the Will county Farm Bureau held their monthly meeting and social gathering Tuesday evening in the St. Mary hall.

Mrs. George Mager, who underwent a major operation in the Silver Cross hospital, Joliet, last week, is convalescing slowly.

Byron Nelson has been a medical patient in the Silver Cross hospital in Joliet the past week.

Bristol Lauffer is ill in his home. Mrs. Ida Benson has returned from Silver Cross hospital where she recently underwent a major operation.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lauffer entertained their "500" club in their home Saturday evening.

Mrs. Philip Hacker, who has been ill for some time, is now a patient in the Silver Cross hospital.

Mrs. Caroline Marti, who is also a Silver Cross hospital patient, is getting along nicely.

YOUR WIRING CONTRACTOR AND PUBLIC SERVICE COMPANY OF NORTHERN ILLINOIS

Thomas J. Keane, who is to be the speaker of the annual Appreciation dinner of the Potawatomi Trails Council in the Homewood village hall, February 22, is the National Director of Senior Scouting of the Boy Scouts of America for Scouts 15 years of age and up.

The result of an extensive study and carefully selected experiments over a period of years, Senior Scouting is now a definite part of the Scouting movement. Built around the desire for young men to have adventure and romance and the need for guidance in the selection of their life's work, this new development in Scouting has already proved that it fills the great need there has been for such work.

Combining a program of strenuous, man-sized outdoor activities, such as exploring, camping, cruising, with an attractive grouping of special activities along vocational lines, the success of this new branch of Scouting is assured.

In seeking the man to give leadership to Senior Scouting, the National Executive Board felt that there was no one better qualified to undertake this responsibility than Mr. Thomas J. Keane. His experience as a camper, explorer, navigator, executive, engineer, author, leader of older boys eminently fitted him for this position. He is considered one of the outstanding speakers of the Boy Scouts of America.

Mr. Keane is a university graduate in arts science, and engineering. While a student he spent each summer sailing the high seas so that when he completed his college career he had also become a qualified seaman and navigator. Before the World war he spent two years in the Canadian northwest, camping and exploring.

After several years engaged in engineering, Mr. Keane entered the United States Navy, spending five years in active service, during the war and afterward. During the last two years of his service he was Aide to the Commandant of the U. S. Naval Station at Great Lakes, Illinois. He is a member of the Naval Reserve, with rank of Lieutenant.

After the war, Mr. Keane devoted part of his leisure time to research in boy psychology with particular reference to programs for older boy groups.

In the course of this research, Mr. Keane became a leader of one of the first group of Sea Scouts in Chicago, and later helped to organize other Troops throughout the city. Under his leadership, Sea Scouting advanced rapidly until Chicago became the leading Sea Scout city in the world. As a result of his success the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America appointed him as the acting Director of Sea Scouting in a volunteer capacity, and in 1927 he was appointed the Director of Sea Scouting.

Mr. Keane has traveled extensively and has made a study of Scouting methods in thirty countries. In July, 1935, he was one of the delegates at the Sixth International Scout conference in Stockholm, Sweden, at which time he also took part in the Second World Rover Moot.

Commander Keane is a writer and authority on shipping and sea history, and has written stories of the sea for boys. His book "Lubbers Afloat" describes interestingly the first voyage of two boys on a freighter across the Atlantic in which the lore of the sea is brought to the reader who is introduced in non-technical and entertaining fashion to the technical forms of nautical affairs.

"Advertise"

Within the next few weeks there will be much activity in political circles and the voters will hear much high pressure political talk and wind jamming. Many of the candidates will be making promises they never intend to keep, but serve as good bait for getting votes.

We hear a great deal said about corrupt politics and the reason they are corrupt as well as the politicians is because the pledges made during the campaign are not kept. To the average politician a promise is no sacred obligation, but just a means to an end.

If the candidates were sincere and kept faith with the voters, living up to every campaign promise, there would be cleaner politics and a better class of candidates would be elected.

The less a candidate promises, the less mud he slings at his opponent or opposing party, the more faith the voters will have in him and the better his chances are for election.

This year the average voter will have his fill of politics with a swarm of candidates in the field for county, state and national offices. Beware of the wind-jammer and the fellow who makes vague promises or who seeks sympathy votes because he has had hard luck or needs the office badly. This type of politician is no good and if elected will make a very poor office holder.

Select your candidates carefully and vote intelligently. Above all, be sure and vote. Don't say "my vote don't count anyway," because it does count. It is not only your vote but thousands like yours that can bring victory or defeat. But if all these others say the same thing about their vote and stay home, the corrupt element has easy sailing because they do believe that every vote counts, and vote. If you want clean politics and honest office holders you must back up men of integrity when they are candidates for public office.

The following editorial, which appeared in the Daily Calumet on Monday, January 29, is worth reflecting on.

NOTICE TO POLITICIANS

Newspaper advertising rightfully takes credit for building empires, for making mass production possible, for pegging lowest prices for consumers.

Now the power of the press is felt in the political world. It has come to light that a politician has won public office through the medium of newspaper advertisements alone.

Windsor, Ontario, is just across the river and south of Detroit. Electors have just brought about a sweeping repudiation to "leftist wing-ers" and two outstanding business men have been elected controllers of the municipality. One of the successful business men was William H. McCreery, a jeweler.

The entire campaign of McCreery was devoted to newspaper advertising. The McCreery name was already well known through the steady newspaper advertising of his jewelry establishment. Coupled with this, advertising copy for the political campaign was well written. In short, his advertising merely stressed the point that he was willing to serve on the control board and that if the voters wanted him, he was ready. And he made not a single speech!

Like in America, voters of Windsor perhaps were fed up on political wind-jamming. Here was a man who attacked an old-age problem in a different manner—in a dignified manner. Was this not assurance that he would use equal ingenuity in attacking the problems of his city as a control board member? Voters evidently thought so, because Mr. McCreery was high man in the election!

It goes to show that voters know pretty well what it is all about.

Law on the Farm

REMOVING IMPROVEMENTS

A point of issue often arising between farm landlords and tenants is that concerning the tenant's right to remove certain improvements, such as hog houses, temporary fences or cribs which he has constructed at his own expense. Many times neither party gives any thought to the matter until the tenant has to move and proposes to take the improvements with him, at which time the landlord objects, saying that they are a part of the real estate and must be left.

In 1873 the Illinois legislature passed a law which clarifies to some extent the rights of the parties. This law provides that "subject to the right of the landlord to distrain for rent, a tenant shall have the right to remove from the demised premises all removable fixtures erected thereon by him during the term of his lease, or of any renewal thereof, or of any successive leasing of the premises, while he remains in possession in his character as tenant."

It should be noted that three conditions must be met before the tenant may enjoy the right accorded by this law. First, he must not owe the landlord back rent; otherwise the improvements may be distrained (held). Second, the improvements must be ones erected on the land by the tenant. Third, they must be removed before his term expires; otherwise he will not be on the land as a tenant and, according to the law, cannot remove them.

This law does not specifically cover the case of improvements brought with the tenants. However, the courts have indicated that the term "erected" includes improvements brought on the farm as well as those actually erected or built there.

The usefulness of this law depends a great deal upon the interpretation of "removable fixtures" as used in the act. The Illinois courts have held that a corn elevator in a concrete foundation and a crib built on posts sunk in the ground are not removable fixtures, but that a blacksmith shop built on skids is. The general rule is that a fixture is removable when the parties intend to be removed and when such can be done without undue injury to the land or other buildings. As a matter of fact, nearly any structure not fastened permanently to another building or put on concrete foundations can be removed. This would include individual hog houses, brooder houses, and other structures of a similar nature. Doubts about the removability of some structure such as fences, windmills, cribs, bins or lean-to sheds should be settled in a lease. If the parties do not have a written lease or if the contemplated structure is not covered by it, the tenant should procure a written agreement from the landlord allowing him to remove it before he starts to build.

The law referred to may be found in the Illinois Revised Statutes, Chapter 80, Section 34.

Just around the Corner

EVEN big-city folks must have their "neighborhood stores"! Most of them would no more think of going down town to fight their way through the crowds in search of a roast for dinner than they would of walking to the factory to get a pair of shoes.

City women know that their neighborhood stores can supply them just what they want—and that, in most cases, the service is more alert and friendly.

The same thing is true of this "neighborhood". Our merchants—the men whose ads you read in this paper—are in position to furnish your home with the best and most popular brands of goods. Not only can they save you money, but they gladly relieve you of a lot of worry and loss of time.

MOKENA SCHOOL NEWS

Primary Room

We are happy to have John Skeese back after a seige of pneumonia. Kenneth Gee and Ethel Mae Wieber are still confined to their homes with sickness.

Intermediate Room

There have been a great many pupils absent in the Intermediate room, due to illness. We will be glad to welcome them all back again.

The pupils have made posters of valentine men and flowers with which to decorate the room.

The fifth grade is working on a new project in geography. This project of Holland is to be correlated with drawing and English also.

A "Good Work" board has been formed in our room, and the pupils are all eager to have their best work on display here.

On the bulletin board there is a fine collection of pictures of the life of Abraham Lincoln. These pictures have been brought in by different pupils in the room.

Junior High Room

The spotlight for this week's biography rests on Mrs. Cappel, the instructor of the Junior High school. She is a native of Minnesota, where she attended school in Truman and later in Mankato. Among her first teaching posts was one in an Indian reservation where she acquired valuable information on Indian character and customs; her students remember with interest many incidents she has told them of while there.

Eleven years ago Mrs. Cappel came to Mokena to assume the duties she still holds today. Her first term she coached the grade school boys' basketball team. This was later supplanted by her work with girls' basketball teams which were able to capture tournament honors for two years. This vigorous interest in sports she also shows by her constant moral support of our teams and by her regular attendance at games.

Mrs. Cappel gets great joy from contact with people of all ages and types, and she is never happier than when working with some group. Her special interest in youth is shown by her counseling the first local Girl Scout Troop.

These words might well sum up her personality, vitality, understanding, progressiveness, and "pal-plus."

High School

Lillian Hellmuth is in Silver Cross hospital in Joliet with pneumonia. Last week Betty Stark and Laverne Gunhouse were ill with the flu and were unable to attend school. Many other students have been out a few days because of colds.

Yours truly wonders what C. B. and a certain little Girl Scout (P. S. she lives next door to him) were doing after the Girl Scout meeting.

Who was walking down the hall at school with A. L. after the bell rang Thursday noon? It wouldn't be a little freshman boy, would it, whose initials are W. M.?

Guess who this very handsome sophomore is. He is five feet 9 inches tall, and weighs 130 lbs. He has brown eyes and dark hair. He is a very good basketball player and plays the left guard position on the high school team. his sophomore's idea of a perfect girl is one anywhere from five feet 6 inches to five feet 9 inches tall, not fat or skinny, and either blonde or brunette, of course. She should be good-looking, neat, and like to have fun. When asked his ambition he said it was a deep secret; we will find out some day.

Mokena High and Grade school teams suffered a double defeat at the hands of Crete on Friday, February 2, with the grades losing 28-13, and the High school, 44-24. Both were fast, thrilling games.

night in honor of the newly weds, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Sorenson.

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

The meeting was called to order at 7:30 o'clock by the Scout leader. Plans were made for a cookie sale in the near future for the purpose of purchasing our uniforms, so don't be surprised if you find a Girl Scout stationed on your doorstep. "Opportunity knocks but once," so be ready to buy.

A discussion on plans for our investiture ceremony took place, so watch these columns for our special announcement.

Our recreation half-hour was used mostly in talking of our uniforms and the badges we will work for. The meeting was adjourned at 9 o'clock with the singing of taps.

Virginia Nebeker.

SCOUT DOINGS

Bob Homerding opened our meeting by leading the boys in the Scout oath and law. Later we were introduced to four visitors who presented themselves for application as members of our Troop.

The contest between the Eagle and Bat patrol has ended. The Eagle patrol gained the most points by passing innumerable tests. Scoutmaster Dale gave the winning patrol troop numerals and medallions as prizes.

The individual earning the most points was Hobart Meyers, with 142 points. David Rabinov and George Rinke tied for second place with 112 points each.

These same three boys attended the Board of Review meeting at Midlothian last Thursday and successfully passed the requirements for the Second Class office.

After a number of games the meeting was closed with a benediction.

This Week In Washington

By Ralph E. Church

Representative, 10th Cong. Dist.

Congress in becoming economy minded. That should be encouraging word to the taxpayers of the United States and to any one at all interested in the continued solvency of the country.

According to the President's budget estimates, on June 30, 1940, the national debt will reach $44,458,000. The limit under existing law is $45 billion. For political reasons the Democratic members of Congress would like to avoid having to raise the legal limit by an out-and-out vote on the issue. If a Democratic member votes against a bill to raise the amount of public debt allowed by law, he will be accused by his own party of deserting it. If, on the other hand, he should vote for such a bill, he is certain that his Republican opponent will seize upon that vote to use as an issue before the people. And so, the majority of strategists are anxious to avoid the issue, particularly in an election year.

There is one phase of government lending and spending with which the people generally are not sufficiently familiar. I refer to the extensive use of the "corporate device" in carrying out extensive spending-lending policies and at the same time escape the public debt limitation. It is used to obtain greater freedom in financial matters. The use of the "corporation" as a governmental agency removes the necessity for large annual appropriations by Congress to the agency and also eliminates the ordinary check on expenditures by the Comptroller General.

Since March of 1933 the Administration has created from time to time more than 20 Government owned or Government-chartered corporations. These Federal corporations have the power to borrow as much as $14,127,000,000 by the issuance of their own securities, guaranteed as to interest and principal by the Treasury. As of October, 1939, the amount of such corporate securities outstanding was $5,831,000,000. But the important point is that this indebtedness, notwithstanding the fact that payment is guaranteed by the Treasury itself, is not reflected in the public debt.

Bonds issued by the Federal corporations, guaranteed as to principal and interest by the Treasury, are just as much an obligation of the people and a national debt as bonds issued by the Treasury itself. The fact that one is "indirect" and the other "direct" does not lessen the government's obligation and burden on the people. Whether the government finances its spending thru the Treasury itself or thru "artificial treasuries" in the form of corporations, is of no moment. The fact remains the money is borrowed, and the Government is obligated to make it good as guarantor or indorser of the loan.

There is thus a formidable volume of "hidden liabilities" which the public debt figure does not show. We thus find ourselves technically within the debt limitation but actually to have already exceeded it. No amount of technicalities or tricky book-keeping can escape the cold facts. It is hoped the existing economy attitude in Congress will continue to grow.

Warren L. Wood Files Nomination Papers for House

Representative Warren L. Wood's nominating petition, which places his name on the Republican ballot for consideration by the voters of the 41st Senatorial District at the April 9th primaries was received by the Secretary of State on the first day for filing.

Warren L. Wood is the youngest veteran of the House of Representatives, and has had that distinction during the three terms he has served this district.

During the last campaign he was given the responsibility of handling the legislative contests in the down-state senatorial districts and successfully organized them to produce for his party its first House majority since the present administration came into power.

Gaining prominence during the past session, Mr. Wood was chairman of the Committee on Railroads, Aviation and Transportation, and vice-chairman of the Committee on Agriculture. He also served on Appropriations, Education, Insurance, Roads and Bridges, and Waterways committees, and was appointed to membership on the Legislative council by the Speaker.

Asked of his stand in the next session of the legislature if re-elected, Rep. Wood said: "Economy and still more economy. It can be done with honest, efficient state government. It must be done or this democratic representative government will soon cease to function. That shall not happen here."

Parrots, Mice Make Circus Out of Radio

Animals Give Headache to Broadcasters, but It's All Good Fun!

By HOWARD NELSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
NEW YORK. — Ordinarily speaking, the European war is more important than a singing mouse.

That was why—without reflection on the vermin's qualifications—the National Broadcasting company recently answered "No" to the following radiogram:

"Still interested in singing mice? A sensational one in Nieuwen, Holland, sings like a canary. A white mouse to boot!"

It's only a few years since radio held its first singing mouse contest. More recently star performers from every available genera and species have been invited to appear, lest mice gain a monopolistic grip on the microphone. Today's list of animal performers reads like the index of WPA's book, "Who's Who at the Zoo." Everything from a boa constrictor to a cuckaburra bird.

Public interest is responsible, which is the same reason municipalities maintain zoos.

A Headache to Radio Men.

But while the animal kingdom fascinates radio fans, behind-the-scenes arrangements have been a succession of violent headaches to broadcasters. The wire and letter correspondence relating to these arrangements look like the legal briefs in a Supreme court suit.

Worry No. 1 is animal temperament. If a beastie comes into the studio minus microphone manners, there ensues petting, coaxing, cajoling and perhaps a merry catch-as-catch-can. Production men assigned to such programs have evolved their own technique, learning the language of birds, elephants and lions.

They well remember when Horace the Hippo made her radio debut with a snort from Jinja, Africa. John F. Royal, NBC's vice president in charge of programs, was crossing the Atlantic when he heard from a fellow-passenger how Horace enjoyed the short-wave music from New York. Every time a familiar melody was heard, Horace would move his four tons about the golf course at Jinja, making appreciative grunts. Royal decided to serenade Horace with a special broadcast from Radio City. They chose Jerome Kern's "The Hippopotamus" for this occasion.

'Are We Mice or Men, My Friends?'

"GET BACK THERE AND SING!"—In canine language, that's the warning Peggy, mouse singing coach, gives the roaring rodents auditioned for the international contest of vermin virtuosi.

She Has an Understudy!

Canary birds are among radio's most seasoned performers. Six years ago one sponsor signed up "Blue Boy," a virtuoso with a repertoire of 300 songs. It was the first bird, according to amateur ornithologists, to sing tunes other than its natural ones. "Blue Boy" was considered so valuable that her sponsor engaged another canary as an understudy.

First heats in a new Olympic canary tournament were broadcast in December from San Francisco, where 100 birds participated. National and international contests are scheduled to follow.

A. A. Schechter, director of NBC special events, once thought a talking parrot contest would be fun for radio fans. When parrot fanciers got wind of the plan their suggestions, warnings, comments and parrot pedigrees poured in en masse. Wrote one Californian: "Our parrot is basking in the sunshine ready, willing and able, sans bronchial and pneumonia germs, to chatter, guzzle, whistle and snap at a cracker. Kindly send prize at once."

Mabel Up and Died.

Final auditions of the talking parrots were presided over by a group of speech authorities. Secretly, Schechter was passing the buck. He didn't want to hear any more parrot talk. He had received letters from Local No. 9 of the New England Association of Parrotcasters and from guys who signed themselves Bob White, R. U. Perroquee, etc.

The New Englanders maintained that "Oscar is the best of the lot," but admitted that "he is most discouraging at times." From Columbus came praises of "Mabel," who was coming along in fine shape until she died unexpectedly. From all points of the compass came: "I've got a parrot . . . I've got a macaw. I've got a talking crow! I've got a warbling pigeon."

Then, at the height of this parrot fever, Schechter wrote to his special events men throughout the network: "Dr. W. Reed Blair, director of the Bronx zoo, has advised us there is decided danger in holding the contest at this time. Tropical parrots are susceptible to bronchial pneumonia, etc., etc. . . we will, therefore, postpone the contest to the warmer month of May . . ."

The broadcast actually came off in May, whereafter Schechter declared a holiday for all hands.

Radio Becomes a Circus.

There is considerable speculation about what future radio holds for the animal kingdom. Going down the list of past events, historians already espy programs featuring Clyde Beatty and a cast of African lions; jungle snakes and crocodiles encountered in South America by the Holden expedition; a zoo ship arriving in Boston with specimens of the animal kingdom from Africa; a frog jumping contest; a trout fishing tournament; a word-eye view of a busy beehive; a debate between turkey gobblers, no holds barred; a whaling expedition in San Francisco harbor, and a convention of crickets on the hearth.

Radio these days is a menagerie, an aquarium, a zoo; in other words, it's a circus!

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Reviewed by
CARTER FIELD

New Deal left wingers are said to be flirting with Senator Wheeler . . . TVA's feud with general accounting office makes further appropriations doubtful after congress adjourns . . . Radical views are credited to Thomas E. Dewey in downtown New York rumors.

WASHINGTON.—Some of the left wingers in the New Deal have been actively flirting with Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana. They bang him on the back, and whisper in his ears at big dinners where the diners circulate. They tell him they are for him. At the recent dinner of the famous Alfalfa club several spectators nearly had heart attacks when they saw J. Bruce Kremer, for many years Democratic national committeeman from Montana, greet the senator warmly, and engage in an apparent heart to heart talk.

Sen. Wheeler

Now this was "hot stuff" to the politically minded audience for more than one reason. It was the first time Wheeler and Kremer had spoken pleasantly for many years. They are old political feudists in Montana. As a matter of fact, it was Bruce Kremer who figured in the original coolness between President Roosevelt and Senator Wheeler.

Wheeler was one of the "For Roosevelt Before Chicago" leaders. With his then colleague, Senator Thomas J. Walsh, he did yeoman work in that pre-convention campaign of 1932. But unlike nearly all the rest of the early workers in the Roosevelt vineyard, Wheeler didn't share in the grape harvest.

The answer was Bruce Kremer. Kremer was an old personal friend of Roosevelt. He stuck closely to him during the campaign. After election it was Kremer and not Wheeler who got all the plums so far as Montana patronage was concerned. Wheeler didn't like it and was frank to his friends about it. Kremer said nothing, but kept on putting in his thumb and pulling out plums.

Disregard of Wheeler Cost Roosevelt Plenty There are those who suspect Roosevelt paid a pretty high price for this disregard of Wheeler. They think that if Wheeler had been provided a fatted calf or two at the patronage table, and his old enemy had been unwilling to make such a smashing attack on the Roosevelt court packing bill, and the Republicans could not have gleefully made him leader of the fight.

So when Kremer walked up to Wheeler and seemed to be trying to bury the hatchet, right under the nose of the President—who was the guest of honor at this Alfalfa dinner—there was considerable buzzing. "Kremer must think Wheeler has a real chance," was a comment made by dozens of the spectators, many of whom had never figured themselves that the Montana senator was in the running.

Remember how John L. Lewis bashed Wheeler during that court fight? And now is inviting him to speak to a union meeting! It isn't Lewis who is causing the Wheeler talk, however. It is dyed-in-the-wool Roosevelt men—men who would give anything in reason to have Roosevelt get a third term. The trouble is they don't know any more about what Roosevelt is going to do than Paul McNutt, and they want to play safe. They do not want McNutt. That is one point on which the left wingers are set. They realize they can't get Robert H. Jackson, whom they prefer to anybody, and they are beginning to think that, if worst comes to worst, and Roosevelt will not be drafted, maybe Wheeler would be better than somebody else that might be foisted on them. And they want a welcome at the White House if Wheeler should happen to make it!

Little Chance for More Appropriations for TVA Prospects for more TVA appropriations, after this session of congress ends, don't look any too bright as a result of the closeness of the votes on various would-be crippling amendments in the house of representatives this session.

The administration could muster a majority of only six—110 to 104—against an amendment which would have cut the 40 million dollar TVA appropriation in half. And this when there are 97 more Democrats than Republicans in the house! Another amendment, aimed at the same appropriation, but directed specifically at the Coulter Shoals dam, was defeated by only 112 to 109—a margin of three.

Then Representative Andrew J. May, whose own interest in his coal miner constituents has gradually turned him into a hater of hydroelectric power, and who has been the spearhead of the fight this session as he was last, proposed that no funds should be available for TVA until it had been subjected to auditing by the general accounting office.

Now for reasons sufficient unto itself, the TVA has warred bitterly with the general accounting office almost from its inception. There is no possible charge of partisanship against the general accounting office. There is little complaint from most strong New Deal agencies, including the old AAA, the present soil conservation substitute for AAA, the various functions under Harold L. Ickes, etc., all of which are audited by the general accounting office. As a matter of fact the TVA is unique in not being required to submit its books to the G. A. O.

TVA Bitter Against

General Accounting Office

So desperately is the TVA administration against the general accounting office that leaders in the house recognized that if the May amendment should prevail, it would be tantamount to defeating the appropriation outright. Speaker William B. Bankhead took the floor on the amendment and pointed out that there might not be time to get through legislation putting TVA under the accounting office in this session, whereupon the appropriation would be held up.

He did not say why there might not be time, but everybody in the hearing of his voice knew. They knew that every friend of TVA in both house and senate would fight such legislation bitterly.

Mr. Bankhead was able to rally the Democrats sufficiently on this to beat the May amendment, 153 to 132. As a matter of fact, whips had been beating the bushes to get administration members to the floor, partly as a result of the terrific administration opposition to having the general accounting office auditing forced on TVA, and partly because the previous votes had been so close as to throw a scare into TVA friends.

TVA officials, from David E. Lilienthal down, have made no bones of their hatred of the general accounting office auditors.

But TVA critics say that if the general accounting office forced the TVA to keep its books in orthodox fashion certain things would come to light that the TVA wants to keep hidden. TVA critics do not charge corruption. But they do think that the much vaunted yardstick would vanish in thin air.

Radical Views Credited

To Dewey in New York

Perhaps the most interesting single development in the presidential campaign now getting under way will be some speech to be made by Thomas E. Dewey revealing his philosophy about taxation, relief and economics.

It is likely to be interesting because of the wild rumors Washington has been hearing, mostly from downtown New Yorkers. If any fraction of what they have been saying is true, most conservative Republicans will be thumbs down on the New York district attorney. If he should follow the line of the Minneapolis speech, there are a great many shrewd politicians who think it will be very difficult to beat him for the nomination.

What gives any observer here pause is the tremendous sentiment against Dewey which seems to exist among conservative New York Republicans—not Republican leaders, particularly, but Republican business men and financiers.

The wild things they are saying about Dewey's philosophy may not be true, observers admit, but there must be some reason why they are so strongly against him. When it is eventually made clear just what that motive is, the situation will be clarified.

Conceivably, the downtown New York opposition to Dewey might prove an enormous asset in the rest of the country.

Such Economic Philosophy

Would Cost Dewey Votes

One New Yorker attacking Dewey told friends in Washington that Dewey thinks the government should take all of every income above $5,000 a year. Dewey has never said anything to that effect in public. Presumably, if that is an accurate statement of his economic philosophy, he will advocate it in some speech to be made before the presidential primaries are held. This seems logical because if Dewey really believes that, which the writer very much doubts, he would also believe that it was good political doctrine.

Candidates generally try to avoid being smoked out in advance on issues. They like to figure "timing." But Mr. Dewey will not be able to wait until he sees whether the Democrats renominate Roosevelt, name another New Dealer, or place a conservative at the head of their ticket before making his position on several essential issues very clear. He will have to do it before the first important primary test in which he meets Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan.

He will be constrained to do so, if for no other reason, because at present he is getting all the disadvantages of his alleged radical views, and none of the advantages. (Bell Syndicate—WNU Service)

White sauce for boiled potatoes, cauliflower, carrots and asparagus can be dressed up by a liberal sprinkling of paprika.

Look over dahlia bulbs stored away for the winter. If they seem dry or shriveled sprinkle them with water.

Chewing gum can be removed from washable material by softening the gum with egg white, then washing.

Preparing Starch.—To give a glossy finish, use soapy water in preparing starch for laundry.

When measuring syrups or molasses, dip cup in hot water and mixture will not stick to the sides of the cup.

Tasty Nuts.—To give a better flavor to nuts heat them for five minutes in a moderate oven. Such heating is especially advisable in the winter time when nuts are likely to be stale.

New Flannels.—It is an excellent plan before washing new flannels to soak them for a quarter of an hour in cold water with a good handful of salt. Then wash them in the ordinary way. This makes washing much easier and the articles look beautiful when dry. If new colored goods are allowed to stand in salt water and rinsed in the same water, there is no chance of the color running.

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions. These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes. If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

U. S. Exposes Air Secrets — But Shhhh!!

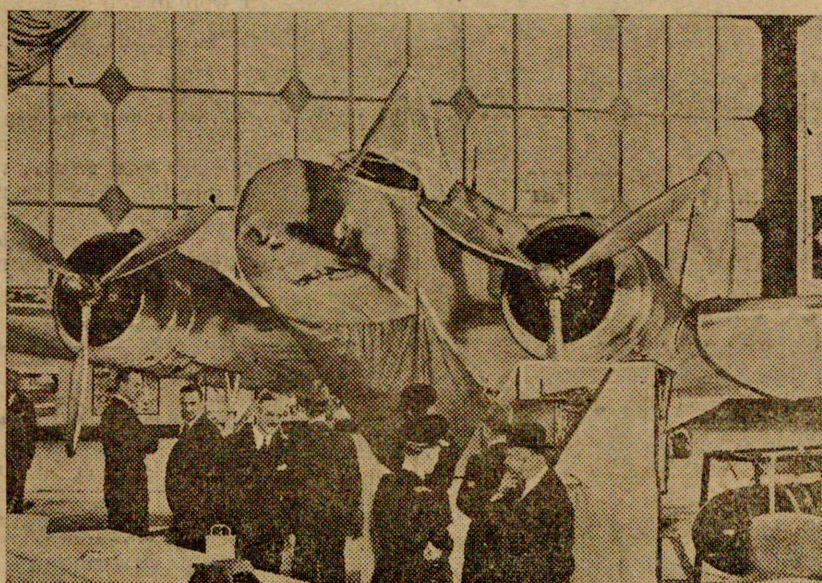

WASHINGTON.—American aviation turned an important corner here, authorities agree, with the unprecedented public showing of the United States army air corps' most advanced equipment which hitherto has been shrouded in mystery.

Conceived originally to inform congress of the latest developments of military aviation, the demonstration was so convincing to President Roosevelt that at his instigation it was kept open for three additional days, giving thousands of average citizens a chance to see the results of the close co-operation between the military branch of Uncle Sam's defense forces and the American aircraft supply industries.

Held at Bolling field near here, the army air exhibit consisted of two feature attractions: a three-quarter-mile lineup of ships in which one or more of each type of plane used in the army was featured; and two hangars jammed with an array of camouflaged pursuit ships and enough aviation instruments and tricky equipment to make a would-be spy deliciously happy, despite shrouds of taped canvas which blanketed certain vital mechanisms.

Show 'Mystery Ship.'

A headliner was the army's "mystery ship," the much-discussed Airacobra interceptor pursuit plane, said to have flown more than 500 m.p.h. in test flights. Nearby was a garish group of weirdly camouflaged pursuits, including the P-39 which has a tricycle landing gear. Some were covered with blobs of dark, dusty green and foggy gray;

ON PARADE—Spectators looking over a standard Douglas bomber B-18X, with special armament equipment, during the army air corps exhibit at Bolling field. New equipment still in the "secrecy" or experimental stage was concealed by tarpaulins. President Roosevelt spent 50 minutes at the field.

others were black and dull green, while a flying fortress was a nightmare of shocking pink and weary blue. However, the crazy-quilt patterns served the purpose of blurring outlines and eliminating reflections from wings and other surfaces, officials explained.

Certain to have a salutary effect on future support for America's military aviation was the evidence of the public's keen interest in understanding many of the features which hitherto have been regarded as intelligible only to most advanced aeronautic engineers. Both government officials and the public took ample time to digest information presented to them in the form of animated displays, charts and cut-out models. Newest methods of testing wing strength and stress and the famous Goodrich de-icer, an ingenious air-and-rubber device which officials said has done more than any other single development to make high-altitude and winter flying safe, were presented.

Aerial photographic equipment, complete with portable developers for fast wartime scouting, was ranged near compact communications units with which headquarters can maintain contact by radio, telephone or telegraph with planes in the air.

CHAPTER XIV—Continued —19—

Autumn selected a half-opened pink rose from a vase on her dressing table and drew it through the lapel of her jacket. The effect was chastely sweet, she decided. Well, one had to contemplate the trivial details if one kept going at all—especially when the important things of life seemed bent on one's undoing. Bruce Lander might just possibly call while she was away—no, no, there must be an end to such thoughts as that! She tightened her lips as she heard Hannah's voice calling her from the foot of the stairs. That had been Florian's car, then, that she had heard entering the driveway.

"I'll be down in a moment, Hannah," she called back, and hastily dabbed a powder puff to the shadows under her eyes.

She had almost convinced herself that she was gay when she descended the stairway and approached the drawing room door. On the threshold, she paused abruptly and checked the greeting that was ready on her lips. The young man who rose to meet her was not Florian, but Bruce Lander.

"Hello, Autumn," he said quietly as he came toward her. "I was afraid I might not find you at home."

She felt the wild, hot flush that covered her cheeks. "Why—Bruce! I had no idea it was you. I was expecting Florian."

In her confusion she knew, of course, that she had stumbled wretchedly there.

"I'll not stay more than a minute, Autumn," he said, with a diffidence that brought her a quick marveling of incredulity.

"Oh, please!" she breathed. "Sit down—until Florian comes, at any rate."

What on earth was she saying? She felt as if her wits had left her completely. What she had just said, in effect, was that he might leave the moment Florian arrived. But perhaps Bruce would not care to meet Florian—after their last encounter.

She seated herself and Bruce took a chair near her. Somehow she could not bring herself to glance directly at him in her sharp awareness of the distraught look on his face. Every instinct of her being, alive to his nearness once more, informed her that Bruce Lander had been suffering ever as she herself had suffered.

"I had hoped you might come," she found herself saying, the words stumbling out recklessly.

He darted a quick look at her. "Had you, really? I—I wasn't sure you would care one way or the other."

"Oh!" She was not sure whether or not she had spoken. Her fingers twined tightly together in her lap.

"I dropped over to say good-by, Autumn," Bruce went on. "Tom Willmar says you are planning to leave for England within a few days."

"I haven't set the time yet," Autumn replied. "It won't be for another ten days, anyway."

"I am going into the hills for a couple of weeks," he continued. "I'm leaving early in the morning. You'll probably be gone before I get back."

Her voice, when she spoke again, seemed to limp like some injured thing. "Oh," she said, "it was nice of you to come."

He opened his cigarette case and offered it to her. She was obliged to make her fingers rigid in order to control their trembling as she held the cigarette while Bruce lit it for her.

"I came, Autumn," he said at last, his voice strangely tense. "because I did not want you to leave with the feeling that—that we are not friends."

A desire to give way to tears almost overwhelmed her as she looked at him now and recognized what it meant for him to speak so frankly. She could have gone to him in that moment and wept in his arms.

"I have had no such feeling, Bruce," she said with some difficulty.

"I couldn't blame you if you had," he said. "I think I told you—one night—that we could not be friends."

She smiled at him but did not speak, smiled frozenly, in a silence that was unbearable.

"I wanted you to know, before you left, that we shall always be friends—because we must be. I had dinner with Hector the other night."

"He told me so," Autumn said.

"I heard the whole story—our whole story," Bruce went on, with evident emotion. "I wish you had told it to me before."

Autumn lifted her hands toward him slightly in a gesture of appeal.

"I wanted to tell you, Bruce, but you must know why I could not."

"I understand that perfectly, Autumn. I should have felt the same about it myself—and would probably have acted as you did."

She forced herself to look squarely into his eyes. "It has all been terrible—for both of us."

"Forget it, then," Bruce said firmly. "What's past—is past!"

As he spoke, a car drove up before the door and came abruptly to a stop. Bruce got up and walked toward the window.

"That must be Florian now," Autumn said.

"It is," Bruce told her. "I'll be on my way."

He came toward her and held out his hand. She slipped her hand into his and thought in swift panic that she was losing him now, forever.

"Did you mean what you said—that the past is past?" she asked him hurriedly, as Florian's footfall sounded at the door.

Before he could reply, Florian had hailed them from the doorway. Bruce drew back a step and Autumn turned to meet Florian, who was coming toward them, his usual easy self, his hand extended.

"Hello, folks!" he greeted them. "Great to see you again, Autumn! And you, too, Bruce! How's the big sheep man? Gosh, I haven't seen you for an age!"

"The last time we met—" Bruce began, but Florian interrupted him.

"Say, the last time you spoke to me—you had murder in your heart."

"I admit it," Bruce said with a smile.

"You're great on that defending-a-woman's-fair-name stuff, Bruce. You'll get a reputation if you're not careful. You looked ready to kill me that night—kill me with your two hands, as they say in the thriller."

"I know I was," Bruce admitted. "I owe you both an apology for what I thought that night."

"Don't spoil it, now," Florian admonished him. "You know, you really should have lived in the days when knights were bold—and all that rot—when running a man through was just part of the day's work." He laughed at Bruce and then turned to Autumn. "Give us a drink, Autumn. I'm as dry as an old salt mine."

"Sorry I can't stay with you and join in one," Bruce said. "I've got to get into the hills first thing in the morning and I've got a lot to do before dark."

"Sorry," Florian replied. "I was hoping we might have you down at the ranch for a little party this weekend. Autumn is coming down to help us celebrate her going away."

In fact, Lin told me she intends to telephone you tonight about it."

"I'd like to go," Bruce assured him, "but I can't put off the trip another day. Tell Lin for me, will you? I'll not be home to take her call."

"You're not leaving tonight?"

"No, but I'll be staying up at the cabin in the ravine tonight," Bruce replied. "I have some work to do up there on some new corals I'm putting in."

"Well, business is business," Florian observed, "and I've had enough of it to last me for a month. How about that little drink, Autumn?"

"I'll say good-by, then," Bruce said, and gave Autumn his hand once more.

Autumn held his hand for a moment without speaking, then turned away as Bruce started for the door.

"Call me up when you come out of the hills," Florian suggested as Bruce waved him a farewell.

"Right!" Bruce replied and was gone.

Florian turned to Autumn as the door closed. "Come along, darling—one drink and we'll hit the trail."

Autumn brought the ingredients and permitted Florian to mix them. He kept up an incessant chatter concerning his trip to Vancouver and the scores of small interests that had occupied him since their last meeting.

Autumn did her best to listen but found it impossible to keep her mind on what he was saying. When at last Florian filled the glasses and handed one to Autumn, she sipped it once and then set it aside.

"Come on, darling," Florian urged. "We'll have to be making tracks."

She looked at him. "I can't go with you, Florian," she told him.

"What!"

"I'm sorry," she replied, "but something has come up—since you telephoned. I've got to stay here tonight."

Florian was puzzled. He knew from her manner that there was no use in urging her to come with him. She had made up her mind.

"That's rough on me," he said, "but you've become a woman of affairs, and there isn't much I can do about it, I suppose."

"There's nothing anyone can do—about me," she said, "except myself."

Florian was silent for a moment. Then he helped himself to another drink and lifted it in his hand, regarding it thoughtfully. At last he looked at her over the rim of the glass.

"You know, Autumn," he said slowly, "I have a hunch you will not go to England at all."

"I don't know, Florian," she admitted.

"You don't want to go," he told her.

"You know I don't."

"I thought as much," he said, lifting his glass. "Well—here's luck!"

Autumn lifted her glass and drank with him. When she set it aside once more, she got to her feet.

"You are going to stay for dinner," she announced abruptly, and in spite of his protests she went to the kitchen to confer with Hannah.

The sound of Florian's car on the highway was still audible to Autumn as she hurried to her room and began removing her white linen suit.

She changed quickly to her black riding clothes and fastened a bright green scarf about her throat, her hands trembling with an unaccountable excitement.

Her flight down the stairs and out of the house brought from old Hannah a mere despairing click of the tongue. She had long since given up the struggle of trying to cope with the vagaries of her young mistress.

The sun had gone and the new moon had cut a barely perceptible silver curve in the pale sky as Autumn mounted her horse and turned him westward. She was glad, shamelessly, that her gaze fell full upon it, and neither over her right shoulder nor over her left.

Beneath the serene dome of evening the mountains had drawn into their blue secrecy. The drowsy murmur of the range drifted toward her and overwhelmed her senses with its prophecy of fulfillment.

Bruce had told Florian that he would not be at home. He would be in his cabin. She turned from the trail and rode over the hills straight in the direction of the ravine. As she came to the white birches and looked ahead, she saw the cabin among the trees, almost hidden in the dusk. There was no light in the window, and her heart fell at the thought that he might not be here, after all. If he had already gone—

She rode up the narrow trail and dismounted among the birches, leaving her horse to graze as she approached the door. She did not knock, but pushed the screen door quietly open and stepped within.

Bruce was on his knees in the middle of the floor, packing a heavy box with supplies. He looked up quickly, then got to his feet and

EAST AND WEST

By TALBOT MUNDY

• Lynn Harding, a beautiful American girl, is vacationing in India as the guest of the Maharajah and Maharajah of Kadur. Two men enter her life: Carl Norwood, a level-headed officer of the British army, and charming, unscrupulous Prince Rundhia, heir to Kadur's throne.

In the inevitable conflict between the age-old customs of the East and the conventions of the West—made even more exciting by Norwood's efforts to settle a boundary dispute among the natives—Prince Rundhia pits all the craft and guile of Oriental philosophy against Norwood's Western code.

Lynn, attracted by something different in both men, watches breathlessly as the battle of wits and brawn works itself out to an overwhelming climax as dramatic as anything Mundy has ever written.

faced her in the shimmering gloom of the place. She retreated a step and leaned her back against the frame of the doorway.

For a moment neither spoke. Then he stepped toward her.

"Autumn!" he said, his voice quick with excitement.

"You did not answer my question—this afternoon," she said.

"What question?" he replied.

Autumn strove to speak but her voice failed her. Bruce came and stood looking down at her.

"What question?" he repeated.

"Did you mean it—when you said—the past is past?"

"I meant—just that!" he told her.

"Forever?"

"Forever—and ever!"

She looked at him for a moment before she spoke again.

"And you told me once—that I should never come here again," she said, smiling up at him. "Did you mean that, too?"

The slender furrow deepened in either cheek as he leaned toward her.

"I meant that, too," he said. "I meant it—then."

She caught her hat suddenly from her head and flung it across the room.

"I'm here!" she said. "That's why I've come."

(THE END)

Mexican Shrub Yields

Vegetable 'Whale Oil'

Nature sometimes turns up surprising things for the researcher, and when one needed product becomes scarce a substitute often is found.

This is strangely true in the matter of whale oil. An oil similar to whale oil now is produced from the seed of a shrub found in Arizona, the lower part of California and Mexico. It is known by a variety of names, the wild hazelnut, the sheep nut and the goat nut. The Mexicans know it as the joboba, which is pronounced much more softly as hoboba.

It is a distant relative of the better-known and thickly branched boxwood, although it is dioecious—that is, the male and female flowers are borne on separate plants. Only female plants bear the nuts from which the liquid wax comes.

The nut itself is not rare. For centuries it has been relished by the Indian tribes inhabiting the area, and even the oil, which had not previously been analyzed, has been used commercially as a hair tonic. The seed is egg-shaped and ridged, and as a rule is about one-half inch long and three-eighths of an inch thick.

Twenty-five pounds of the nuts were gathered in Sonora, Mexico, and shipped to a commercial feed firm in St. Louis. Then they were sent to the bureau of chemistry, where the oil was extracted from the seed. It was found that these seeds yielded 51.2 per cent of a light yellow oil.

The testing of this oil started in the usual way. First they treated the oil with a strong alkali solution as in soapmaking. Vegetable oils under this treatment yield a soap and glycerin, but joboba oil yielded only about 50 per cent of soap and about 50 per cent of a yellow oil. Gadoleic or eicosenoic acid, the principle acid present in this soap, has never before been found, except perhaps in very small amounts, in any vegetable oil. As its name indicates, it is closely related to oleic acid, which is a usual constituent of vegetable oils, but gadoleic acid has 20 carbon atoms in its molecule, while oleic acid has only 18 carbons in its molecule. The results of these tests, in which the component parts finally were separated, showed the difference between joboba and all ordinary vegetable oils.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

THE PERILS OF REJECTING CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 21:28-43.
GOLDEN TEXT—I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me.—John 14:6.

Fearlessly facing crucifixion within a few days, Jesus stood in the temple, there facing His bitter enemies and replying to their attacks in words such as no man ever spoke. He brought them face to face with the very essence of sin, which is the rejection of Christ. Their own words condemned them, but when they should have repented, they became embittered and hardened in their sin. Let no one who reads these lines follow their example, but if the Holy Spirit brings conviction, turn to Him in repentance and faith.

Every Sunday School lesson is of great importance, but possibly no lesson we shall ever have to teach will be as important as this one, for it deals very plainly with the awful peril of rejecting Christ. Eternal destiny depends upon the choices made in response to this lesson. Let every one of us study it and teach it with solemn earnestness.

I. Actions Speak Louder Than Words (vv. 28-32).

All church members, who have come into that relationship by smoothly spoken words of acceptance and devotion to Christ which then have not been lived out in the daily walk, may see themselves pictured in the son who courteously and glibly assured his father that he could depend on him, and then promptly went his own way. They will see that they need to repent and substitute real heart-moving and life-changing action for their words, lest the harlots and publicans pass them and go into heaven before them. Professing church members without any evidence of God's power in your life, turn to Him now!

Note the word of encouragement to repentant sinners. Perhaps someone who reads this paragraph has at some time rejected Christ and has since thought that he could not turn back, that it was too late for him to do the thing which his heart tells him to do even though his lips have spoken unkind words of rejection. Friend, consider the one who said, "I will not," but who did his father's will. Come to the Saviour now; you will find Him ready to receive you.

II. Selfish Unbelief Results in Christ-Rejection (vv. 33-41).

This parable clearly relates to the Israelites who had rejected the prophets sent to them by God and who were now about to kill His Son. The heartbreaking story of Israel's unbelief and rejection of Christ and the judgment which has been upon them all the years since then, is not something over which we should gloat, but rather something which should move us to tears and prayer for our Jewish friends. After all, are we any better than they? Are not the appalling majority of Gentiles walking in that same road of selfish unbelief which leads inevitably to the rejection of Christ?

No man or woman can go on selfishly taking the benefits of God, using them for self advantage or comfort, turning a deaf ear to the cries of God's messengers, and hope to have any ultimate result other than Christ-rejection. It is high time that thoughtless people who perhaps have no deliberate intention to be wicked or to turn Christ away, should awaken to the fact that they are doing just that by their manner of living.

III. Rejection of Christ Does Not Defeat God (vv. 42, 43).

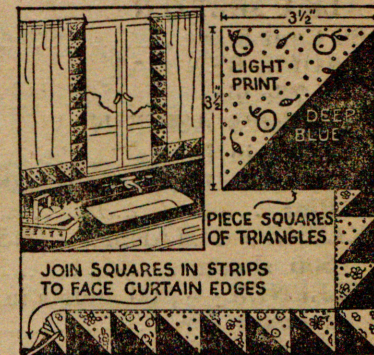

At first glance one wonders why Christ at this point turned so abruptly from the figure of the vineyard to that of the cornerstone. "The reason why He leaves for a moment the image of the vineyard, is because of its inadequacy to set forth one important part of the truth which was needful to make the moral complete, namely this, that the malice of the Pharisees should not defeat the purpose of God—that the Son should yet be the heir—that not merely vengeance should be taken, but that He should take it. Now this is distinctly set forth by the rejected stone becoming the head of the corner, on which the builders stumbled and fell, and were broken—on which they were now already stumbling and falling, and which, if they set themselves against it to the end, would fall upon them and crush and destroy them utterly" (Trench).

God was not defeated by the crucifixion of Christ. Christ will not be defeated simply because men reject Him in the world. We who are on His side, we who are the followers of the Lord are on the victorious side. Those who oppose Him and speak ill of His name may appear to be victors for the moment, but the judgment of God is yet to come upon them.

Pieced Border for Kitchen Curtains

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

DO YOU remember this old-fashioned Saw Tooth quilt pattern? It has been used for the border of many a handsome quilt. It is so effective and so simple to piece that it should serve more decorative purposes. Here it trims kitchen curtains of unbleached muslin. It surprises one a little to see how modern it looks. Cut a piece of stiff paper in a perfect square and then cut diagonally through the center. One half will make your triangle pattern. The size suggested in the sketch makes a very striking border. If a very strong, bright color is used for the plain triangles, a narrower border in this design will also make a good showing.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears has prepared for our readers a set of three Quilt Block Patterns from her favorite Early American designs. Included in the set is the Kaleidoscope, and the Whirlwind. The third is the Ann Rutledge, which Mrs. Spears sketched from an original in the Rutledge Tavern at New Salem, Ill., where Abe Lincoln boarded, and where he courted the proprietor's daughter, according to the romantic legend so familiar to movie goers. It is an unusual variation of the Nine-patch, and rich with historical background. For set of three complete patterns, send 10 cents in coin to Mrs. Spears, Drawer 10, Bedford Hills, New York.
